All this is false. Then the great New York papers at once appear'd, commencing that evening, and following it up the next morning, and incessantly through many days afterwards, with leaders that rang out over the land with the loudest, most reverberating ring of clearest bugles, full of encouragement, hope, inspiration, unfaltering defiance. Hetookherhomeandherparentsweresohappytoseeher. I yet remember Lafayette's visit. And if that were allowed in writing which is not allowed in speaking, I think a very great inconvenience would arise: which is that greater license could be taken in that respect wherein greater care ought to be taken; and the industry bestowed on writing would work harm instead of good.
